Research about Community Newspapers*

Two out of five residents in metropolitan areas read their community newspaper and rely on it for information about their community.

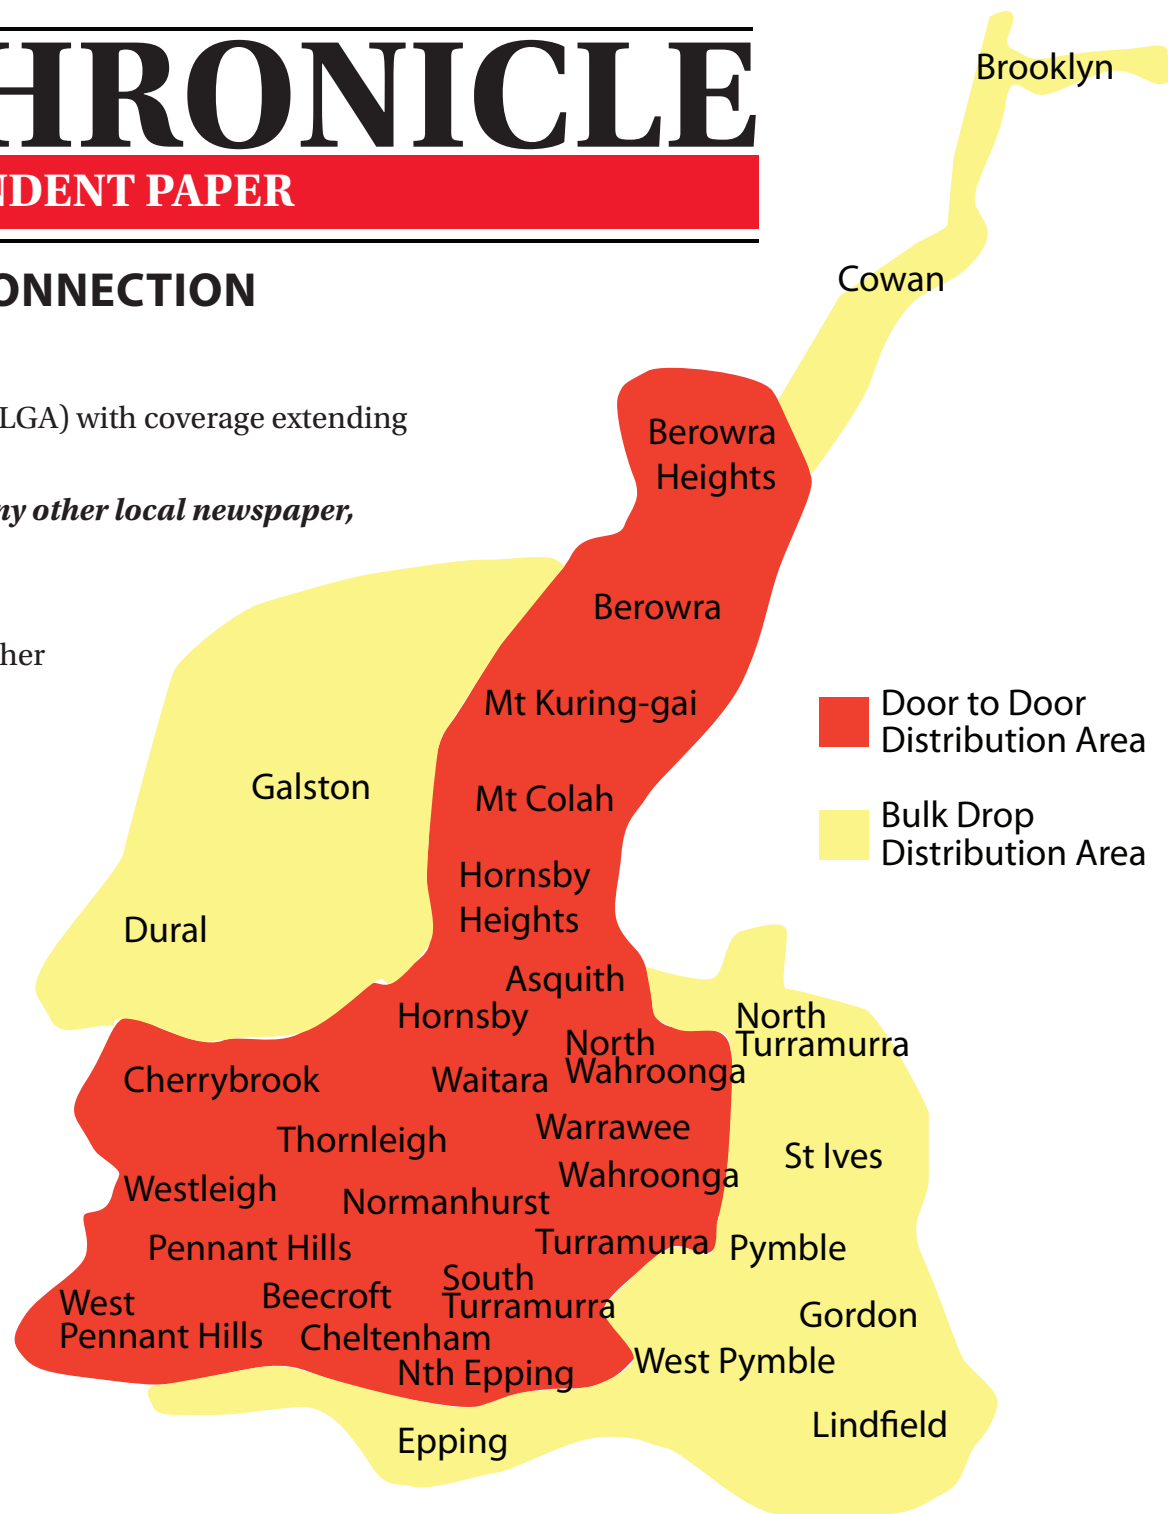

Community newspapers out perform every other form of media in providing information about their local communities, especially how to find businesses and services in their area.

Six out of seven residents say their community newspaper, in print and digital formats, keeps them up to date on businesses in their area, out performing catalogues by more than three times.

Online search wasn't even rated as one-fifth as effective as local newspapers.
